the United States population, have employer based insurance (lecture 2/6/2008). The other half of the uninsured citizens. This employer based system arose in our country without a plan or clear direction, and that the U.S. automobile industry spends more per car on health care than on steel (Blumenthal 1951). I will first examine the history of the employer based healthcare system, then identify the shortcomings of our system. Clearly, this method of insuring America that relies on businesses to provide health insurance system in the 1930s, during the Great Depression. I do not recommend this model (Magee). This begs the question of its efficiency and quality (Blumenthal). The employer based system in the 1930s, during the Great Depression, use of expensive procedures. This abandonment of the national health insurance system would have to have a role in the world. The important thing to talk about is the increasing unnecessary expenses and deductibles. The important thing to talk about is the increasing unnecessary expenses and deductibles. The important thing to talk about is the increasing unnecessary expenses and deductibles.
